Daily Bible Reading Plan

- This plan goes through the Old Testament once in two years. It goes through the New Testament once per year and Psalms twice a year, or four times in two years. It goes through the Proverbs three times in two years and the book of Ecclesiastes twice in two years (once in the Old Testament reading section, and then once at the end of the two years in the place where the book of Proverbs had been being read.
- Sunday is left as a day for corporate worship and hearing the word. It is also a good day for catching up anything you missed during the week. The last week of the two year plan also has some additional days for catch up reading.
- There are no dates so that it can be started at any point during the year and it is more forgiving for those who just get off track for a few days here and there.
- The idea with the Psalms reading is to pray each Psalm. Even for those times when the Psalm doesn't fit your current experience, take the opportunity to pray for those you know for whom it is their experience. If you don't know someone, pray for believers that are having that experience that you don't know—possibly in other countries.
- The New Testament order of reading does not follow straight through. Rather, the reading of the Gospels is spread throughout the year with epistles in between. Luke is followed by Acts. The reading of John's Gospel is followed by the other writings from the same apostle (1 John through Revelation). Due to size and simplicity, Jude is also included in that section.
- Most of the readings are in even chapters. Occasionally, the reading will stop or start on a specific verse within a chapter. The notation for verse will be done with a superscript numbers next to the chapter numbers. So that Daniel 11:1 will be shown as Daniel 11¹. The reasoning for breaks that are not on an even chapter vary. Sometimes it is an attempt to keep important material together (e.g. Mark 4³⁵⁻⁵), and at other times it is to keep the reading more equivalent from day to day. There is never a perfect way to divide up the reading, so you may want to make your own notes and adjustments as you go.
- You can find devotional writings cataloged by book of the Bible at www.bible-reading-devotions.com. On the right side of the page there are labels for the books of the bible. By clicking on the book name, you will see a list of devotions for that book of the Bible. You may find that on Sundays you could look up some readings for the sections you read the week before or will be reading in the week ahead.
